

https://www.vdberk.com/trees/zelkova-carpinifolia/

Zelkova carpinifolia

25 - 30 m
10-15m
oval to vase-shaped, half-open crown, capricious growing twigs glossy brown, densely hairy, bark grey-brown, exfoliates in small plates revealing orange bast slightly crooked ovate to oval, dark green, 4 - 9 cm inconspicuous, unisexual, monoecious, green, April/May crooked round, approx. 0.5 cm, green, later brown None
usually not toxic to people, (large) pets and livestock humic, moist and loamy tolerates paving 5a (-28,8 to -26,1 °C)
good resistant to frost (WH 1 - 6), can withstand wind clearstem tree, multi-stem treem Caucasus
Zelkova crenata

Large tree with a distinctly upright habit and ascending branches. The branching often begins near the ground. Eventually the crown becomes oval to vase-shaped and 25 - 30 m tall. The young twigs are brown and hairless. Old bark is grey-brown, initially smooth but later peels off in small plates revealing the orange bast. The slightly crooked, ovate to oval leaf is dark green with rough hairs on top. The underside is lighter with soft hair. In autumn the leaf turns brownish yellow. The inconspicuous green flowers appear during or just after the leaf emerges and are followed by small, crooked, round fruits. Superficially, the tree has something of Ulmus parvifolia but differs from this in the unisexual flowers and the wingless fruits. Easy park tree with lovely crown shape.